

Thai Basil

Thai basil has purple stems. Their leaves are narrower and are more stable under high temperatures or extended cooking than regular sweet basil. Thai basil has an anise-like and slightly spicy flavor. Widely used in Southeast Asian dishes, it is always a staple for Vietnamese Pho. Can be used as a substitute for basil, bringing a fresh pungency to any dish.