

Fresh Coriander

Fresh coriander, also known as laksa leaf or Rau răm, has long, narrow, bright green leaves with a dark purple, maroon-colored crescent on the surface. It has a pungent, citrusy, and slightly peppery flavor. A staple in Vietnamese cuisine, frequently paired with salads, soups, and balut, and is often used as a robust substitute for cilantro.